

This Is Very Serious – ‘Some People’ Are NOT Taking It Seriously

Coronavirus: No time for complacency, says NHS England

Today Saturday ‘we’ needed to carry out our ‘essential’ shopping, not being able to get a slot online at any of the supermarkets. We went to Sainsbury’s (Oxney Road) I remained in the car throughout, my wife wore gloves and sprayed the trolley down with industrial cleaner.

My surprise was the number of people there – at 10:30, the car park was half full, and from my position, counted as people went into the store. Every 10 seconds someone went in it was ‘busy’ for ‘essential shopping’ I saw 3 people with nothing else in their trolley but ‘Beer’, I saw 2 people exit with just a newspaper and 3 people just carrying a ‘lottery ticket. I don’t think ‘people’ realise the seriousness of the situation – I am not in ‘panic mode’ Do ‘they think It is not going to happen to them – fine – but they are putting the rest of society at risk.

I am quite sure that almost everyone is watching the news and internet for all the latest. I had a look at how Singapore has curtailed the spread of the virus, yet a small but compact nation, they have ‘new’ cases but have managed very well.

I am pleased that our Neighbourhood Watch Group is now officially a partner registered with The Fenland Hub – (see my previous post) We had our first 3 requests on Friday – our coordinators collected and delivered 2 sets of prescriptions for those who were unable to do so themselves. We also did some ‘urgent shopping’ for a disabled lady.

Please do not be complacent – Just look how the situation is evolving in London.

Play safe – have as little physical contact as possible – take the advice the Government is giving (although Boris and others we know didn’t) Please have a quiet weekend. See next page for a bit of light news....

Here we have 2 small reptiles with no worries about what is happening outside of their world...
