DEVOLUTION PRIORITY PROGRAMME

Devolution Priority Programme Unveiled Today – Elections Cancelled

The Government's long-awaited Devolution Priority Programme is being revealed today, setting out the roadmap for Local Government Reorganisation (LGR) and devolution in England. As part of this major shift, elections in affected councils will be cancelled, ensuring stability during the transition.

To support councils through this process, the Government is providing capacity funding to help local authorities plan for reorganisation and devolution. But how will councils navigate this enormous change? What data and evidence are informing decisions about governance structures, service delivery, and financial sustainability?

One of the biggest challenges will be disaggregating critical services like children's social care, adult social care, and public health, ensuring that residents continue to receive support without disruption. How will funding be divided? What role will shared services play? And how can data-driven decision-making help smooth the transition?

At itelligent-i, we're already working with councils on scenario modelling, financial forecasting, and service transition plans, using advanced data analytics to assess the impact of reorganisation. We believe that data, AI, and insights will be the key to ensuring an efficient, effective, and resident-focused transition
